

Erratum: New Jersey Photographers of the Civil War and Postwar Era: John P. DoremusBy Gary D. Saretzky*DOI: <https://doi.org/10.14713/njs.v8i2.301>

This erratum corrects an oversight in the Winter 2022 publishing of the article “New Jersey Photographers of the Civil War and Postwar Era: John P. Doremus.”

The 2021 equivalents in the following paragraph on page 163 were incorrect in the article published in the Winter 2022 issue. They have been corrected in the paragraph below:

Doremus’s expenses for his photographic supplies are an indicator of the extent of his business. On November 12, 1867, he paid his monthly bill at E. & H.T. Anthony in the amount of $111.03, equivalent to about $2,032 in 2021 dollars. As for his income, in the last week of December 1867, which he termed a good one, he took in about $210 at his “upper gallery,” by which he meant the one at 172 Main Street.<sup>1</sup> This income is equivalent to about $3,844 in 2021 dollars.

---

<sup>1</sup> Doremus diary, December 27, 1867, Stereo World, 14.